

“Every once in a while, a truly special book comes down the theological pike: a book both scholarly and well written, a book that stretches the imagination, a book that changes the state of a discussion... Biggar’s careful moral reasoning offers a model that, if followed, would deepen and mature the Christian discussion of the ethics of war and peace.”

—George Weigel

Join the experts to discuss this important book.
22-23 May 2014
Christ Church, Oxford

→ Register at www.mcdonaldcentre.org.uk

General Sir Hugh Beach
 Cecile Fabre
 John Kelsay
 Claus Kreß

Deputy Commander-in-Chief, UK Land Forces 1976-7
 Professor of Philosophy, University of Oxford
 Professor of Religion, Florida State University
 Professor of Criminal Law, and Director of the Institute for International Peace & Security Law, Universität zu Köln

Cian O’Driscoll
 Esther Reed
 Nick Rengger
 Paul Schulte

Senior Lecturer in Politics, University of Glasgow
 Professor of Theological Ethics, Exeter University
 Professor of Political Theory & International Relations, St Andrews University
 Honorary Professor, Institute for Conflict, Cooperation, & Security, University of Birmingham

Tom Simpson

University Lecturer in Philosophy & Public Policy, University of Oxford, and former officer with the Royal Marines Commandos

James Turner Johnson

Professor of Religion, Rutgers University

MCDONALD CENTRE
 FOR THEOLOGY, ETHICS & PUBLIC LIFE

