University of Oxford
20th March 2015

'Globalising and Localising the Great War' is an interdisciplinary project based at the University of Oxford that brings together scholars from a variety of backgrounds, to provide fresh insights on our understandings of the Great War.

Submissions are invited from a broad range of topics, backgrounds, and approaches to provide a similarly wide-ranging and interdisciplinary conference. We particularly welcome papers on global/transnational, cultural, military, political/legal, social, and economic histories of the war.

To apply, please send a 200 word abstract, stating in the subject-line which focus area your paper most closely links with, to glgw.gradconference@history.ox.ac.uk by 30 January 2015.
